Farm Work for January.

While January is not a month of the greatest activity in farm work, it is certainly a month in which to put everything about the farm in readiness for the big spring rush. Fences are to be built and repaired, gates are to be hung, stumps are to be gotten out, terraces are to be built, ditches are to be dug, along with dozens of other jobs that the hustling farmer will tackle now, rather than put them off until later, which too often means putting them off until "never."

Whether we shall rush plowing every dry day during January is a question that can be answered only after a full consideration of local conditions. As a general proposition, however, it may be safely said that under the best systems of farm practice, all 1915 cotton land that is to go in corn in 1916 is now in crimson clover, which is to be plowed under in April, the oats, wheat and rye are already sowed and "greening up" the fields, leaving only the corn and pea fields to be considered. Where these are not too rolling and have considerable litter on them, I would certainly keep the plows going in them every day the condition of the land will permit.

And right now, early in the game, let's make up our minds that nothing—absolutely nothing—that can be plowed under or that can be used to stop a gully, shall be burned. This means, too, on most farms, that we'll keep fire out of our fields altogether, using anything from straw and grass to logs a foot in diameter to help us in our soil conservation and soil-building campaign. To burn anything that will make good humus, stop a wash, or prevent one, is an economic crime, and the man who continues to commit it deserves and may expect full punishment in the form of poor land, poor crops, and poverty for himself and for his family.

On many farms existing gullies must be filled and the washing stopped, while at the same time provision must be made against uncontrolled water making any new washes. How to go about these matters is, I believe, one of the very biggest problems we have to solve, and January, when other work is less pressing, is perhaps the best month of all the year in which to tackle it.

Terraces—the broad, cultivated kind,—winter cover crops to hold the soil together, plenty of humus and deep plowing are the approved methods for keeping land from washing. Some enthusiasts believe that cover crops alone, or cover crops and deep plowing, are unnecessary. For the average rolling, sandy land farm in the Cotton Belt, I do not hesitate to say that these non-terrace advocates are wrong, and that I'll prove them so before any competent jury. Of course it may be that they have never made the acquaintance of the broad cultivated terrace, 15 or 20 feet wide, with crops growing on it, and over which mowers, binders, wagons, tractors, or any other sort of farm machinery may pass with ease; and that they only know the narrow terrace or bank. This latter kind is certainly a "scrub" among terraces, and I don't blame them for not loving it more.

Under ordinary conditions the terrace lines should be laid off with a fall of from four to six inches to the hundred feet, with a vertical drop between successive terraces of three or four feet. With one of the farm levels advertised in The Progressive Farmer, these lines can be laid off very rapidly and accurately. It should not be forgotten, either, that accuracy in running these lines is of extreme importance, as badly run lines will mean terraces with sags in them and consequent breaks. As the lines are run they should be marked with bits of newspaper weighted with a little earth, and then plowed up to the required height and width.

Every fine day I'd get out as much of the manure as possible and spread it on the fields. If these are not too rolling there will be little loss of the manure from washing, certainly less than from washing and leaching if it lay around the barnyard, and doing the work now will keep too many insistent jobs from piling up on us in March. A mighty fine place to put some of this manure is on a clover sod that is to be turned for corn in the spring.—Progressive Farmer.

You've hit the right tobacco

when you fire-up some Prince Albert in your old jimmy pipe or in a makin's cigarette. And you know it! Can't get in wrong with P. A. for it is made right; made to spread-smoke-sunshine among men who have suffered with scorched tongues and parched throats! The patented process fixes that—and cuts out bite and parch. All day long you'll sing how glad you are you're pals with the national joy smoke

You take this testimony straight from the shoulder, men. You can smoke a barrel of P. A. without a kick! It hands out all the tobacco happiness any man ever dreamed about, it's so smooth and friendly. It's a mighty cheerful thing to be on talking-terms with your pipe and your tongue at the same time—but that's what's coming to you sure as you pin your faith to Prince Albert!

R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO CO., Winston-Salem, N. C.

It's an easy job to change the shape and color of unsalable brands to imitate the Prince Albert tidy red tin, but it is impossible to imitate the flavor of Prince Albert tobacco! The patented process protects that!

Everywhere tobacco is sold you'll find Prince Albert awaiting your cheerful visit. Buy it in toppy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; handsome pound and half-pound tins—end-in that classy pound crystal-glass humidor with sponge-moistener top that keeps the tobacco so fit!
